New Remote Technology Project to Provide Safe Access in Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault Cases to Begin in Kanawha

For immediate release Thursday, October 21, 2021

CHARLESTON, W.Va. – A pilot project that allows victims of domestic violence and sexual assault to file petitions for protective orders without going to a courthouse is expanding to Kanawha County and will be displayed during a news conference at 10 a.m. Monday in the Kanawha County Judicial Annex, 111 Court Street, Charleston.

The event will be held in the first-floor courtroom of Eleventh Family Court Circuit (Kanawha County) Judge Brittany Ranson Stonestreet.

Judicial officers from the state and local level, as well as advocates, will be in attendance and available for media interviews.

Everyone attending this event must wear a mask and adhere to social distancing guidelines.
